

INSPIRING WISDOM FOR LEARNERS

“Learning is not attained by chance. It must be sought with ardor and attended with diligence.”

Abigail Adams

It is very easy in today's world, to confuse information with learning. Information is not learning, just as it is not wisdom. Information is information. Information lacks character. It lacks soul. Meaningful learning is not found in comfort, or in facts, or in a printout. It is acquired through struggle, risk, and courage.

The learning wisdom and inspiration of the great minds: Carlyle, Cummings, da Vinci, Dewey, Disraeli, Emerson, Einstein, Franklin, Fuller, Galileo, Hoffer, James, Lincoln, Michelangelo, Napoleon, Postman, Ruskin, Seneca, Toynbee, von Goethe, and many, many more...

A meaningful life begins with, and is sustained by, ongoing learning. It is a quick and easy guide to the timeless principles that have served as the fundamentals for meaningful learning and wisdom throughout the ages.
